News from the Acting Director of the Canberra Renal Unit

Dear All,

First of all, my sincerest apologies for missing the Canberra Region Kidney Support Group meeting (Patients' Forum – see opposite page) held early in October, but a number of circumstances saw me distracted enough to miss the event completely. I heard all went well with much interest from the many participants. Myself and the rest of the Renal Unit are strongly supportive of the need for a robust and energetic patient support group in the region, as this will lift the profile of renal disease and help to advocate for and shape renal services in the region.

The contracts for the new dialysis facilities in Goulburn, Moruya and north-side Canberra are continuing to be developed with the hope that patients will be dialysing in them sometime early in the New Year. It now appears that Southern Area Health Service (soon to become Greater Southern AHS with the merger of SAHS and Greater Murray AHS) will use Statewide Renal Services (based at Royal Prince Alfred Hospital in Sydney) as the provider of medical supervision for the Units at Goulburn and Moruya. The exact nature of this support and how it intersects with The Canberra Hospital Renal Unit is still being sorted out and I will update the CRKSG when things are clearer.

The Patients' Forum – Did You Miss It?

On Sunday 10 October 2004, the CRKSG invited all Canberra patients, their Family, Friends and/or Carers to attend a forum, on a range of issues common to renal patients. The aim was to find out what progress has been made and where we are at with kidney failure. There were over 50 attendees who enjoyed a sausage sizzle and drink supplied by the CRKSG. Vince our Secretary and Ray Hemsworth did an excellent job on the sausages. There was a quiet hum of conversation as we got to know each other and compare our situations.

Thanks to Lindsay Warren (pictured) from the Canberra Community Dialysis Centre (CCDC) who spoke on Nocturnal Dialysis. Thanks also to Kennards, who supplied the BBQ equipment.

We are planning on having another Social gathering in the New Year for both new and old members, so become a member today.

Christmas

An exciting development for the Unit has been the announcement that Dr. Tony Clarkson will assume the role of Director of the Renal Unit on an interim basis from early in the New Year. Dr. Clarkson is an eminent and well-known Renal Physician from Adelaide, having been Director of the Renal Unit at The Royal Adelaide Hospital as well as having leadership roles with the SA Medical Board and the AMC. Tony will be a terrific asset for the Unit and I encourage everyone to make him welcome and assist him in any way.

Another welcome development in the region is the greater profile of Kidney Health Australia through the recent appointment of Janine Bevan. Janine has been talking to all the relevant people in the area about lifting the profile of kidney disease in the region. The most immediate task in this regard has been ensuring good support for the volunteer gift wrapping program at Myer stores in the pre-Christmas period. This is an important fundraiser and I would encourage as many people as possible to get behind it.

From everyone in the Renal Unit, have a happy and relaxing Christmas and New Year and we look forward to further developing the service in 2005.

Dr Martin Gallagher
Acting Director of the Canberra Renal Unit

Welcome the new
Director of the Renal Unit
Mr Tony Clarkson

Kidney Health Australia now in Canberra!

Kidney Health Australia (KHA) was founded in 1968 and was originally named 'The Australian Kidney Foundation'. The Foundation has changed to KHA with State Offices.

The newly appointed National Services Manager is Janine Bevan. Janine lives in Canberra and is currently dividing her time between the Sydney Office and working from her home here in Canberra. Members of the CRKSG met with Janine recently and spoke about a number of issues. Janine hopes to set up an office in Canberra and although her job focuses on the National level, she hopes to work with CRKSG members to provide her local knowledge and the needs of renal patients. Janine has previously been employed in Nursing, the Pharmaceutical Industry, Medicines Australia and Diabetics Australia. The CRKSG welcomes Janine and looks forward to working with her.

Living a Healthy Life with Chronic Conditions

My being a member of the Canberra Region Kidney Support Group, having a chronic condition, experience in running small groups, and having a genuine interest in self management of chronic conditions' enabled me to participate in the recent 'Self Management of Chronic Conditions Peer Leaders' Training Workshop'. This course is designed to train members to co-lead 'Living a Healthy Life with Chronic Conditions' Courses, a six week education program, 2 ½ hours per week, designed to assist people with chronic conditions to develop ways of taking a more active part in their self care. Stanford University in California originally developed the course.

What is a Chronic Condition?

Health problems are normally either 'acute' or 'chronic'. Acute health problems usually have a single cause and a rapid beginning. Once diagnosed and treated, people will return to a normal life. With 'acute' conditions, the patient follows the Health Providers directions or orders. Chronic health problems have multiple causes varying over time and gradual beginnings. Diagnosis is often uncertain and unlike acute conditions, where full recovery is expected; chronic conditions may lead to persistent loss of physical conditioning and treatment does not cure the illness. With 'chronic' conditions, the patient and Health Providers roles change to a partnership.

While there are many different chronic conditions, such as Diabetes, Arthritis and Renal Failure, the problems that people experience are often the same. Most people with chronic conditions suffer fatigue and loss of energy. Some experience pain while others have trouble breathing. Sleeping problems are common and some people experience depression. The course covers topics such as:

- Manage your symptoms,
- Communication skills,
- Working more effectively with your health team,
- Pain management,
- Fatigue, energy conservation, and relaxation skills, and
- Dealing with negative emotions.

The course has been extensively researched and results have shown:

- Improved health due to an enhanced understanding of the symptoms caused by your chronic condition,
- Improved well-being and quality of life,
- Improved self-confidence,
- Enhanced ability to cope with pain, and
- Daily tasks are made easier.

This course provides those attending with a tool box of strategies to use. The principles of adopting healthy lifestyles, managing the physical, emotional and social impact of your condition, and how to achieve better communication with health care providers. The best strategy for me was the Communicating with your Doctor session. It always seems that there is never enough time during a doctor's appointment. I now feel confident that using a few items from my tool box (the strategies learnt on course) that I can communicate with my doctors better.

I believe that patients need to play an active part in decisions about their health care in partnership with their health team. This course teaches skills to enable patients to be more active in the management of their disease. There are probably other courses that would also assist patients - I am not saying it is the one and only course. The six week, 2 ½ hours per week, Living a Healthy Life with Chronic Conditions' Courses is available in the ACT. The article is submitted to 'spread the word' and advise others about participating in the program.

To end this article I would like to quote the President of SHOUT:

"Finally, as people living with a chronic condition we need to manage our conditions and to minimise their impact on our lives and not let them control us. Chronic conditions are something we did not want or plan for on our life's journey but our ability to adapt and accept what we can't change will enable us to lead a productive and healthy life regardless."

For more information about the course - contact Susan Sullivan at Arthritis ACT on 62884244, Monday to Friday 9.30 to 2.30pm or E-Mail ss_arthritisact@bigblue.net.au.

Know your Doctors

This issue is the third in a series of articles on the Renal Doctors at Canberra Hospital.

Dr Balaji Hiremagalur

Dr Balaji Hiremagalur Renal Specialist at the Canberra Hospital was born in Bangalore, South India. Bangalore is considered to be the silicone valley of Asia. Balaji trained in Nephrology at the Christian Medical College And Hospital, Vellore, India. The Christian Medical College And Hospital at Vellore is a premier institute of Nephrology in India. The department has to its credit the first successful transplant in India. Over the years, the department has collaborated with leading Nephrology centres in Australia. After completing the Nephrology training in 1988, he practiced as a consultant in Nephrology, at a tertiary private hospital in Bangalore. In January 1998 Balaji, his wife Aruna and children migrated to Australia to start a new life in the middle of the Australia continent, yes in Alice Springs. I asked the good doctor why Alice Springs and he advised me that his Nephrology Professor from India who was working in Alice had enticed him to migrate and practice in Alice Springs. After a few years in Alice Springs, Balaji moved to Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Adelaide to undertake his Fellowship. He completed his advanced training at Princess Alexandra Hospital, Brisbane and was awarded his fellowship (FRACP) before commencing as a Renal Specialist at The Canberra Hospital in 2003. Balaji values the opportunity of educating his children in multicultural Australia and plans to apply for Citizenship next year, when he is eligible. Balaji is completing Diploma in Bio Statistics this year and will be enrolling in to Masters program next year. The studies will assist in planning and analysing research in nephology and to practice evidence-based medicine. Balaji's away from work interests include Classical Indian music and gardening.

In the last issue we incorrectly listed the ACT Health Services - Independent Living Centres address. The correct address is 24 Parkinson Street Weston ACT phone 1300 885 886 or (02) 6205 1900. Email: ILCACT@act.gov.au. The Independent Living Centre (ILC) is an information resource centre that provides an equipment display of hundreds of items that people are able to try and compare. An equipment database of 6000 items, plus information on a range of organisations and services, complements the display.

You can browse the equipment at the centre (except continence management equipment for which an appointment is necessary) and information displays between 12 noon and 2.00pm Monday to Friday. No appointment is required during this time and limited assistance is available.

Kidney donations that don't kill with kindness

By Jacqueline Maley the Sydney Morning Herald. October 29, 2004

When Trevor Karsten received a kidney from his wife, Robyn, he gave her a pair of pearl earrings.

Such a transaction may be acceptable, even expected, in a marriage, but under the ethics of organ transplantation it is strictly forbidden.

The ethical issues confronted by living kidney donors, as well as the health problems, emotional fall-out and technical details of transplantation, were addressed in a booklet launched yesterday by the NSW Health Minister, Morris Iemma.

Kidney Donation by Live Donors is a set of guidelines, drawn up by transplant clinicians, allowing non-directed, "anonymous" live kidney donation to occur for the first time.

This means a person can elect to give a kidney to a stranger, for no reason other than altruism. Two successful kidney transplants from living anonymous donors took place in South Australia earlier this year, and doctors in NSW have received expressions of interest.

"We don't expect it to be large numbers [but] for those people who are genuinely interested in donating and who are stable, there are safe guidelines within which it can happen," said Dr Josette Eris, one of the authors of the guidelines and the chairman of the NSW Transplant Advisory Committee.

As the road toll in NSW declines, so does the number of kidneys from deceased donors. There are currently 758 patients in NSW and the ACT receiving dialysis as they wait for a kidney, but only 84 kidneys were donated from deceased donors in 2003.

The good news is live donations are on the rise. Dr Eris, who is also the head of the Renal Transplant Unit at Royal Prince Alfred Hospital, said the proportion of live kidney transplants at the hospital has increased from about 15 per cent a decade ago to about 55 per cent now.

Doctors stress the guidelines are not an attempt to spruik for kidneys. Even when anonymous donors come forward, they are thoroughly screened, both psychologically and physically.

They will not receive pearls for their troubles, only some pain and scarring. But, as Robyn Karsten, a mother of three says: "With a transplant, as with childbirth, at the end there is new life."

Live kidney donation is a gift. A gift by choice and not by chance. It is a gift of a normal functioning kidney from one living human being to another.

On Holidays – A Pacific Cruise

I joined the Dialysis Escape Line Australia Inc in March 2004 but was too late to apply for the 2004 Pacific Island Dialysis Cruise which was booked out. However, I received a call one day from Nancy (Dialysis Escape Line Australia Inc founder) who said that there had been a late cancellation and asked if I was still interested in a Dialysis Cruise. I sure was. When I told my wife, she asked what ports we would visit. I didn't know – did it really matter, we needed a holiday.

After being on dialysis for six years and having spent some time in hospital earlier in the year, my wife and I were looking forward to a holiday. The idea of a holiday without having to rely on finding out if a hospital would take you as a 'holiday patient' was a bonus.

After a few letters and faxes asking questions of Nancy, we managed to sort out all the paperwork and took off to Sydney the day before departure. I was not about to have any Airline problems spoil my Cruise. Julie, my Renal Nurse arranged for me to dialyse in Sydney on the morning of the Cruise departure. After dialysis, I returned to the motel, picked up my wife and luggage and headed for the Sydney Wharf.

There was a long wait to check in and board the Pacific Sky, but the anticipation of a 7 day, 8 night cruise of the Pacific was enough to remind you why you were waiting. Once we checked in and the luggage was delivered to the cabin, we made our way to check out the dialysis rooms and to meet the Doctor and Nurses. This meeting introduced us to Dr Tony Clarkson (a Renal Physician recently retired after 40 years), three Nurses (Sue Owen from Payneham SA, Samantha Tan from Sydney and John Lancaster from Tasmania) and Manuel Lopes the Fresenius Technician; who would look after the dialysis needs of 12 dialysis patients.

We departed Sydney Harbour around 5 pm Thursday 21 Oct under a partly cloudy sky. At dinner the first night, the 21 people who made up the dialysis cruise party were seated over four tables. Introductions were exchanged and we dined on a five course meal. The meal was great, however I 'picked' at my meal as my stomach had a little trouble with the rocking of the ship.

On the first day at sea (Friday), my appetite returned, as the sea was calm, and I had a feast at breakfast. It was then time to check the Ships' facilities. I had a massage to make sure that I was in 'holiday' mode and we checked out the different activities. The Ship produces a 4 page guide each day that tells passengers what is on. You can do as little or as much as you want. If you want to find a seat and read a book you can. If you want to participate in activities you can start with a early morning walk at 8am, a fitness program at 9am, maybe table tennis, cards, quilling, beer quots, trivia quiz, square dancing, Bingo, play the pokies or gaming tables at the Casino, or visit one of the four lounges or bars and even a cinema. There is also a Hair and Beauty Salon and shops to visit. The first of our party commenced dialysis.

The Captain's Welcome Cocktail Party was held on Saturday night followed by the Celebrity Show featuring Brett Annabel. I dialysed Saturday afternoon for the first time. Whilst I dialysed, my wife watched 'Perfect Match' where single people were matched up and won prizes. She said it was very entertaining.

Next morning we arrived in Noumea, New Caledonia. At the port of Noumea, you could select what you wanted to do (at an additional cost). We went on a guided tour of the Island. Other options included Bays and Beaches by Horse drawn carriage, motor trike, helicopter scenic flight, Jet Ski and many more. You can also do your own thing as Nancy, Sue, Sam and John did by visiting a five star resort on the Island to take advantage of their pool, or more correctly the pool and pool side bar. The temperature was 27 degrees and very humid, and I took advantage of being able to drink more than usual. It was either fortunate or unfortunate that shops were closed on the Sunday depending on how you looked at it. My MasterCard survived the day. That night was 'Fright Night' and a very entertaining presentation by the Pacific Sky Entertainers plus participation by passengers.

Monday 25 October. I had lost track of what day of the week it was, but we anchored off Mystery Island, an uninhabited sandy islet all but surrounded by coral reefs. Tenders took us ashore.

It takes only a couple of minutes to walk to the other side of the island and about 45 minutes to walk all the way around. There is ample shade on the sandy beach, but the tropical sun is strong and you must use sunscreen. That night, on board, was Island Night where you can wear your Island gear and dance the night away under the stars.

Tuesday 26 October. I thought that Mystery Island was good, but the Isle of Pines was pure bliss. Apart from the obvious, swimming or snorkelling, sun bathing and relaxing, the Isle of Pines was a picturesque island. I have never seen sand so white and fine it was like powder. The water was cool and refreshing and the colour was so blue it was paradise. However, I returned to the ship early so that I could dialyse. Whilst the ship is anchored at a port, dialysis is only done during the afternoon so that all patients can make the most of the ports. That night after our normal five course meal we were entertained by a 'Shake Rattle and Roll' show which capped off the day.

Wednesday - Another Luxurious day at sea! The days' Bingo jackpot was at $2,500.00, there was an Ice Carving demonstration, Marriage Match (a game to see how well Married couples know each other) and the show in the Show lounge was an Australian theme titled 'G'Day G'Day'.

Thursday (last full day) I dialysed in the morning. In the afternoon, was 'Battle of the Sexes' an activity to find out who is superior – the boys or the girls. The Bingo jackpot of $3000.00 was won – not by me. After dinner, a Passenger Talent show unearthed some talented passengers.

The last day, we packed and said good bye. Until the next cruise.
